"I LOVE SHOWING OFF TO FRIENDS WHEN I'VE FOUND A BARGAIN"

TV presenter Natalie Pinkham, 30, lives in London with her boyfriend Owain, 26, who works in brand sponsorship.

"I'm a sporadic shopper – I'll spend a whole day burning my credit card, but then I feel so guilty that I won't do it again for months. Designer labels are an occasional treat for me. I recently bought a gorgeous shoes-and-handbag combo from Hugo Boss that I virtually had to re-mortgage my flat to buy – they cost £700 – but I know I'll wear them forever. Most days you'll find me in Urban Outfitters and Topshop, as my day-to-day style comprises slim-fit jeans and a long top worn with wedges. If I want something a little more classic, I'll pop into Reiss.

I think it's always worth spending money on shoes; great shoes give me confidence. I own over 60 pairs and most cost around £150. I shop a lot at Dune and shudoo.co.uk for designer and bargain buys. I'm certainly not a snob when it comes to fashion but if something looks fabulous, I don't care how much it costs or where it comes from."

FASHION FACTS

- Natalie's dress size: 10
- Annual spend on clothes: £3,500
- Usual budget for... a skirt: £50; a top: £30; trousers: £60.

Natalie wears:

Cotton shift dress (sizes 8-20), £20; oversized bangle, £12, both Dorothy Perkins. Cotton cropped jacket (sizes 8-18), £35, Mango. Platform shoes with metal discs, £30, New Look.

"I think this outfit looks tailored and chic – but it didn't cost a fortune. If you wear your clothes with confidence, you'll always look a million dollars. I do love Mango and this jacket is an absolute steal at just £35. I can't believe how reasonable the gladiator-style heels are too. I love showing off to friends when I've found a bargain – I'm not remotely shy about bragging that a top I'm wearing cost only £5 in Primark! In that respect, the tide of fashion is really turning – it's not about how much you spend to look good, but how little." ▷
